HOW

Wilford Van Wagoner was a prominent citizen of Midway. He was president of the Midway Town Board and was counselor to Bishop Jacob Probst of the Midway 2nd Ward.

He was the first County Commissioner elected from Midway after statehood. He served as chairman of the County Commissioners. He was president of the Midway Irrigation Company off and on for nearly 20 years. He was a vital force in the success of law suits of the Midway Irrigation Company, when their case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision of the Supreme Court secured the water rights of the farm owners as against the acquisition of the water rights by mining developments, that is the mining developments which penetrated the water shed which was the source of irrigation water. Mr. Van Wagoner was active in the Church, civic and political program of the community. Mrs. Van Wagoner was a capable, sympathetic and understanding helpmate to her husband. She was a devoted Latter-day Saint and was active in all of the Church projects and programs.
